2017 FULLER
FIELD SCHOOL
August 17-18

FEATURING:

RAY ARCHULETA

Rays teaches soil health, and the principles of agroecology. Ray's enthusiasm for soil health is contagious, and his message of interconnectedness of soil and humans is one you won't want to miss. He is also a Certified Professional Soil Scientist with Soil Science Society of America. He recently moved to Missouri where he is in the process of starting his own farm.

WALT DAVIS

Walt has been practicing Holistic Management practices since before the term was coined. He is also the author of 3 books, "How Not To Go Broke Ranching", "The Green Revolution Delusion", and "The Gathering At Oak Creek". Walt pulls no punches when it comes to discussing problems with the current agriculture production model. After almost going broke following the advice of high tech agriculture experts, he spent years developing a biological approach to ranching based on planned grazing management.

Dr. Don Huber

Don has had a long career focused on plant physiology, microbiology and pathology, in academia at Purdue University, as well as in the military where he served in sensitive areas such as global epidemiology, national production capabilities and national security. He taught, researched and published at Purdue University for thirty-five years. His field: soil-borne disease, physiology of disease, and microbial ecology. Dr. Huber is probably best known for his research on Glyphosate and its affects on the soil and human micro biome.

This school goes in-depth to look at ecosystem function, both above, and below ground, and all the actions and interactions that go along with. These 3 speakers have spent most of their lives observing the beautiful complexity that is nature and are going to spend 2 days sharing their findings with you.
